A heartfelt album about embracing life, love, resilience, and the courage to pursue your dreams while there is still time.

You Know
Life brings uncertainty, and learning to trust your own instincts and feelings isn't always easy. I wrote this song as a reminder that sometimes we need to leave the past behind, trust what our hearts are telling us, and find the courage to keep moving forward.

Don't Wait Until Tomorrow
Choosing action over hesitation and creating opportunities to do what you love is something I believe in. It's a reminder to take care of what matters today, so you can move forward without the regrets of doing something you shouldn't have, or failing to do something you should have.

Africa
I wanted to capture what it was like to see the world through the eyes of the animals, their daily struggle to survive, and the kindness of the local people who help them. I felt a powerful connection with the land, and those experiences stayed with me. I long to return and experience Africa again.

Dreams That Washed Away
I wrote this song after Hurricane Helene hit Asheville, NC. We had no warning of the hurricane's devastating strength. I was deeply moved by the compassion, and unity of the people in Asheville. Neighbors shared food, supplies, shelter, and helping hands. Strangers offered comfort and strength, as we cleared debris and began the long work of rebuilding our town. Sometimes it takes a tragedy to reveal the extraordinary compassion and strength within us.

No More Wags
I wrote this song the day my sweet Goldie girl passed away. I was so devastated, that I had to throw my emotions into a song. I didn't know any other way to deal with my pain. I have received so many comments on this song, and every time I read them, it's as if I'm losing her all over again, but on the other hand , I'm glad the song has touched so many people. There will never be another Goldie. She was the perfect dog.

Late Bloomer
This song speaks of following your dream, regardless of your age. Some of us experience things later in life, either because we were busy raising kids, or not motivated, or didn't look for opportunities, or just became complacent. If something is important to you, you owe it to yourself to pursue it. Don't wait, because you never know what the future holds. Go for it now, and be that late bloomer. Better late than never!
